LYNX: AMPLIFY PROJECT

MONDAY, FEB. 21 • 7:30 PM

St. Charles Borromeo Convocation Hall

I want to see the world, not by the whole, but by the all too beautiful small things.

These words, written by Ryan Harris, were the catalyst for LYNX Project's Amplify Series, a project setting the words of autistic youth who are primarily nonspeaking to song for voice and piano. Started in 2016, from an initial collaboration with Ryan and his peers, the Amplify Series has grown into a multi-year project that has shared the voices and artistry of dozens of youth, composers, and performers.

The words of these young writers have brought smiles and tears to audiences across the country, and members of the autism community have expressed feeling heard, valued, and seen through these concerts. Now, LYNX is bringing their Amplify Series to Lewis University. Join us for an evening celebrating these songs and come to understand individuals whose voices are valuable but so rarely heard.

This program is partially supported by a grant from the Illinois Arts Council Agency.
